

Continue activities following the story – Who Gets on the Bus?

ספרית פגימה

By: Nati Bait

Illustrations: Lee Kurzweil

הוצאה: הקיבוץ המאוחד

Age Group: Daycare (2-3)

Family Reading Advice

Getting ready for Purim: Toddlers are introduced to holidays and traditions early on in life. This book touches on the custom of dressing up for Purim which can make various feelings surface. With the help of this story, we can familiarize ourselves with this custom, visualize the Purim party at daycare, and discuss it. Doing so in advance may evoke curiosity and excitement, lessen concerns, and help toddlers be better prepared.

Discussion — Family Costumes

You can look at photographs together – pictures of your toddlers and other family members from previous Purim celebrations – to be reminded of and share childhood stories. You can ask questions such as: What makes costumes special? What sets them apart from our regular clothes? How do we feel when we dress up?

Who is at the Party?

Look at the party illustration together in which all the children are dancing around in a circle. You can point at the various characters (“Here’s a strawberry”) and describe them, while noting at which station they had boarded the bus. During re-readings, you can notice whether the costumes have any special accessories and look for other interesting details.

Family Bus

You can play together – taking turns being the driver and picking up “passengers”, whether they be family members, stuffed animals and dolls, and other items from various “stations” around your home. And what should you do once you get to your final destination? You can disembark and throw a dance party!

QR Code

You're welcome to dress up and dance to Levin Kipnis's well-loved song (Music by Nahum Nardi, performed by Dudu Zakai)

.....

www.pjisrael.org More activities on the Pajama Library website