Proposed Family Activities:

- You may want to act out the story using puppets, and invite each character to explain how they ended up being friends.

- There are two illustrations of the house in the final pages of the book. You may want to ask your child if they can spot the difference between them. What's been added to the second illustration?

- Is there a teacup, piece of furniture, or photograph that's been in your family for a long time? Perhaps there is an interesting story associated with this item. If so, you may enjoy sharing it with your child.

- Your child may like to draw your home and loved ones. Together, you can make a frame for their drawing, and hang it up on the wall.

- Have new neighbors come to your neighborhood recently? Perhaps you know new Olim who have arrived in Israel not too long ago? You may want to make a greeting card for them in the spirit of this book, and print the word “welcome!” on it.

- Where does your family originate from? Perhaps you could open an atlas, and show your child the journey made by your family on their way to Israel. You may want to tell your child about your own childhood home, and show them photographs of homes in which you have lived over the years.
