Activities You Can Do at Home

- You don't need to know how to read to figure out what's going on in these comic strips! Your children can “read” the pictures and tell the story in their own words.
- Even young children can draw a comic strip. Ask them to choose a story they know and create a comic strip out of it.
- Mr. Fibber the Storyteller uses his imagination to invent impossible tales. Children, too, can make up wildly exaggerated and imaginative stories. Together with your children, you could work on creating your own imaginary tale. One of you could begin: “One morning, I was on my way to kindergarten when I saw (fill in the blank)...” The next person might continue the story line with: “...when suddenly, I came to...” At the end of the story, you could select one of the imaginary situations you concocted together, and make illustrations for it.
- What makes you laugh? After you read these comics—maybe close to the Purim holiday—you could host a Family Joke Night.
- Do you know other books by Leah Goldberg? You might look for her stories and poems at your school or library, so you can read and enjoy them together. We hope you enjoy reading and talking about this book!
