Family Reading Advice — "Again!"
Toddlers often ask us to read them the same book over and over again – and they know what's good for them! Repeated reading allows toddlers to re-experience exciting moments, explore their feelings and emotions, join in at familiar points, and learn words by repetition.

A Cheer

Shaul walks along and sings a song that cheers him up, reminding him just how much he loves taking a walk. You can ask your toddlers: “When do you need cheering up?” and put together your own cheer, or a catchphrase based on Shaul’s cheer (such as “I love walking to kindergarten and seeing all my friends”). You can even add a tune to your catchphrase.

Walking in Different Shoes

You can bring your family members’ shoes – slippers, flipflops, boots, and so on – that are various sizes, types, and materials, and invite your toddlers to walk in them, and feel the difference in the various shoes.

Fun in a Bucket

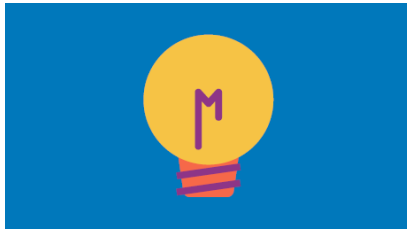

When Shaul steps into the bucket, his shoes emerge white again! You can fill a bucket with soap and water, take some soiled shoes or toys, dip them in, scrub a little, and see their colors change.
